DAYTON, KY.—Miller, the ferryman, and a man whose name does not accompany the statement, after a quarrel over the ferry franchise, resorted to blows. After a lively tussle Miller was struck on the head with a stone and so badly injured that he had to be taken home.

There is a movement on foot to fight the streets with gasoline lamps after the manner of Bellevue. It will not, however, amount to anything, as the city is barely able to raise money enough to carry on a sufficient number of law suits to comport with the dignity of the corporation. People who think that street lights would be better than law suits are biased old fogies and had better attend to their business on the other side of the river.

LEXINGTON, KY.—The best thing for the people, probably, is the action of Councilman Judge Milligan and Councilman Johnson in trying to form a milk monopoly by the introduction of a tax bill for milk wagons. This action, together with their many other absurdities, will no doubt defeat them in the coming municipal election.

The Dispatch office has been removed from the Scott building on Main street, to the old Observer and Reporter office on the Public Square.

Mrs. W. A. Dudley is on a visit to Cincinnati given for the benefit of the Charity Hospital, at the Opera-house Tuesday evening, was one of the grandest affairs of the season. The house was filled to its utmost capacity. Mr. W. G. Hale, in his favorite air, "The Flower of Kildare," retired from the stage amid deafening applause. Mrs. Williamson, who has been in the city for some time, at College Hill, Ohio, rendered a charming solo, "Consider the Lilies," and in response to an encore sang "The Dear Little Shamrock." The audience was spell-bound, and a tender cord was touched among many of her hearers as the gentle strains of her song passed away. All acquitted themselves in most excellent style, and the performance reflects much credit upon an amateur company. Space prevents us from giving as full an account as the performance deserves.

HAMILTON.—Dr. Beauchamp is again quite ill.

This evening the United Presbyterian church social meets at Mrs. John McKee's, Dayton street.

An inquest was yesterday held on the body of Frederick Knollberg, who was found lying in a cornfield on the old Oddsville road, near the intersection of the highway. In the case of the United States against Squire Frazier and others, a writ brought by the Government on the bail bond of Frazier, who was arrested in Boyd county, and failed to appear for trial, judgment was given for defendants. It was proved that the bond was forged and the Boyd county officials imposed on. Wm. Frasier, accused of liquor dealing without Government license, was acquitted.

The Stacey Will Case—The answer of Mrs. Elizabeth Stacey to the contested will case of George Stacey, deceased, was filed yesterday, and is an interesting addition to the history of a singular case. The two executors are Henry Ranshaw and Henry Sutton, one a half-brother and the other a brother-in-law of the testator. The answer alleges that Henry Ranshaw and Mrs. Sopha Sutton, wife of the other executor, were present at her marriage to George Stacey, and Mr. Ranshaw signed the register as one of the witnesses. Henry Sutton was present immediately after the ceremony. She did not hear of his former marriage to another woman until after her own marriage. She had thought him a widower. After her marriage (December, 1906) she lived with Stacey for eight years and a half, in happiness, honor, and mutual esteem, until his death in June of this year.

It is further asserted in the answer of Mrs. Elizabeth Stacey that Mr. George Stacey was in the employ of an iron company in England at the time of his marriage with his first wife, Margaret. After living with her for a number of years he separated from her in 1895, alleging that she was unfaithful, and thereafter failed to behave conformably to her marriage vows. Proceedings in divorce were had in the English Courts, which resulted in a legal separation. Afterward he was married in London to his second wife, and in 1891, accompanied by their children and the children of the first marriage, came to America and settled in Covington, Meigs, W. How Mrs. McGoochen Did Her Work.

[From the Brunswick (Me.) Brunswick Eagle.]

One morning, about two weeks ago, Mrs. McGoochen beamed balmly across the breakfast table on her husband, and informed him that she had concluded to discharge the hired girl and do her own work. This announcement startled Mr. McGoochen almost as much as if she had declared her determination to commit suicide. He had long known that his wife was a heavy drain upon his meager salary, but his wife had educated him to regard it as indispensable, and he had made up his mind to endure it forever. That she should voluntarily offer to dispense with the service of a girl was something for which he was not prepared. Looking at her with an incredulous expression in which hope and doubt painfully mingled, he said:

"You—way—you can't do it, Eliza."

"Can't do it, indeed! I'd like to know what's the reason? Lots of women in this town do a great deal more, and I can't do the work for us three. I'd better go to a hospital and be done with it."

"What put you into the notion?" asked her husband, hardly yet recovered from his surprise.

"Well, Peter," she replied, speaking in a lower, softer, pleading tone, "I tell you, I've been thinking lately how hard you have to work, and how little I have done to assist you, in comparison with what I might and ought to do, and it appears to me that I should try to reduce our expenses as much as possible, and the best way I know of is to do my own housework. We are poor, just making a living, in life, and it's my duty to help you."

With a voice almost choked with emotion at this unexpected evidence of his wife's devotion and energy, he feebly essayed to break her resolution, saying that he didn't want her to be a slave to him, that she was too delicate for the task she contemplated, that all he asked of her was continued love and sympathy.

"Oh, that's all romance," interrupted Mrs. McGoochen. "It's high time my love and sympathy were assuming a practical form. I'll discharge the girl this very day. But there is one condition, Peter."

"What's that, my noble wife?"

"But no carpet you thought we were unable to get. Now, if I do my work it will save at least $100 a year, and you can certainly afford the carpet."

"Of course, my love, if you are satisfied you are not undertaking more than you can perform."

Such was said, and, as it was settled, Mack looked at the carpet on the wall, and found the girl gone. His wife was gone too, but she returned shortly, having only been around telling the negotiator that she was now doing her own work. Dinner was late, but then it was the first meal by her fair fingers, and he could make allowance for the novelty of the position in which she found herself placed.

Acting on her suggestion, Mack brought home a new rocking-chair when she came to supper. They were saving a hundred dollars a year, and could well afford such little things. When his wife returned from her visit to the rest of the negotiator, whom she had been informing that she was now doing her own work, she was delighted with the new chair, and declared that they must have a suit of furniture to match it.

"You know, Peter, that I will more than save the cost of it in the course of a year, and I will feel so proud to know that this was laid out for me."

And so it went, and so it went, and so it went, until Mack could no longer resist the appeal. The furniture was sent down the next day.

About three days after Mrs. McGoochen coaxed Peter into buying her a silk dress, and the next day she wheeled him out of a set of jewelry. The expenses so much by doing her own work that she felt that she was entitled to something extra. It would amount to no more, she reasoned, than the hire of a girl, and Peter could well afford to give it to her.

Mack began to get uneasy. Was there, after all, any saving in doing without a hired girl? Wouldn't that sort of economy bankrupt him in less than a year? He got a piece of paper and figured:

Expenses one week without help:

Carpet.....$ 30

Furniture..... 50

Dress and jewelry..... 50

Total.....$130

Cost of help one week..... 2

Balance in favor of a domestic.....$128

McGoochen was astounded. Grasping the paper and his hat, he made rapid strides for home. Opening the door, the first object that met his frenzied gaze was the hired girl.

Household Hints.

Parents should be very careful and not let the rays of the sun shine directly upon the faces of sleeping children. Strong light is very injurious to the eyes, especially if they are inclined to weakness.

Two teaspoonfuls of finely powdered charcoal, drunk in a half a tumbler of water, will often give relief to the sick headache when caused, as in most cases it is, by a superabundance of acid on the stomach.

The worth knowing that if one volume of castor oil be dissolved in two or three volumes of spirits of wine, it will render paper transparent, and the spirits rapidly evaporating, the paper in a few minutes becomes fit for use. A drawing in pencil or India ink can thus be made, and the ink is placed in spirits of wine the oil is dissolved out, restoring the paper to its original color.

Many persons in preparing potatoes for cooking pare off a thick slice from the surface instead of digging out the eyes. The skinning process is all wrong, as the strength of the vegetable lies near the surface—the starch growing less abundant as the center is approached. The best way is to scour them well, and either bake or boil them with their skins on.

The smoke from the wick of an extinguished candle is very deleterious, and breathing it in quantities would soon cause death. A valuable mention is made of a company of carousers who tricked a boy sleeping in the corner of a room, by one of their number holding to the boy's nose the smoke of a blown-out candle. After half an hour the boy fell into short breathing, trembling and cramps, and died in three days. The composition of this smoke is carbureted hydrogen, carbon dioxide, burnt oil, etc. When putting out a candle light before going to bed, always do it so that there shall be no burning wick left to poison the air of the room.

Potatoes are adapted to be eaten with lean meat—the starchy potatoes furnish the fat, and the heating elements of which lean meat lacks, while the lean meat supplies the bone and muscle-making elements not afforded by potato or fine flour bread. Fat meat affords heating and fattening element, like potato, but in a form less easily digested by most persons.

Potential dishes which have become acquired tastes, it is said, are rendered watery again by drying them completely in a warm place, after which a solution of water glass is to be poured in and allowed to stand over night, then pouring it off and allowing the adherent film to dry slowly.

Flour kept in barrels for a long time acquires a peculiar odor, supposed to be derived from the barrel. This smell actually indicates an incipient decomposition prejudicial to bread-making, owing to the gluten having become partially soluble. It is therefore preferable to keep flour in sacks, unless for short periods.
